

FLORA

Himmapan Mojito

Thai basil, pineapple, lemongrass,
fresh lime juice, coconut milk, ginger ale

Thai basil, pineapple, lemongrass,
fresh lime juice, coconut milk, ginger ale
The Himmapan forest is a mysterious world of mythical creatures that are invisible to the eye of mortals. This will take you on a magical journey through the tastes of Siam.

National Treasure

Mango, cinnamon, tamarind, citrus, sprite

The Ratchaphruek (royal tree) is also known as the Chaiyaphruek and golden rain. The beautiful, small, yellow flowers seem to tumble from the tree, and it can be seen along roadsides, in parks, in gardens, and in various other public and private spaces. It is Thailand's national flower, and it bursts into bloom at the end of the cool season.

Walk On The Wild Side

Watermelon, grape juice, citrus, honey, rose lemonade

The frangipani is a flower native to Thailand that is often used as decoration either beautifying a drink, tucked ear, or within a table display in a restaurant.
These wildflowers may be pink, white, or yellow and have a strong, sweet smell that can be used to make perfume.

Parrot Fashion

Lychee, pomelo, lime, butterfly ginger, tonic

The parrot flower is a Thailand native, classified as endangered and therefore not allowed to leave the country.
The cool thing about the flower of this rare species of balsam is that when you look at its side profile, it looks just like a parrot or cockatoo in flight.

FAUNA

Little & Large

Papaya, guava, coriander, chilli, fresh lime juice, condensed milk, vodka

Thailand is where you'll find both the smallest and the largest creatures. The smallest mammal in the world, the bumblebee bat, calls Thailand home; and its waters you can also find the largest fish, the whale shark.

Nightcaller

Scotch, butterfly pea, galangal & ginger soda, peated whisky

Thailand is full of smaller lizards, but the Tokay gecko is one of the most interesting of them. Before you see one, you're more likely to hear it first – its call (which sounds like “tokay”) can often be heard through the night in Thailand. Beautifully coloured, they're a real treat to find, but you shouldn't try to and handle one – they pack a mean bite and often won't let go without a fight!

Never Forgets

Aged rum, luxardo marachino, banana, pineapple,
lemon juice, grenadine

Surin Elephant Festival celebrates Thailand's favourite gentle giants, showering them with love and affection while parading through town.

Take A Pop

Spiced rum, toasted almond orgeat, bitters, lime oils

Often referred to as a bearcat for its resemblance to both of the animals, binturongs are a strange-looking animal that can be found in Thailand. While not uncommon, their shy nature and proficiency at climbing trees make them hard to spot, but you might smell them – their musk is said to reminiscent of popcorn!

THE LAND OF SMILES

Siam Collins

Kaffir lime gin, fresh lemon juice, cane syrup, tonic

Long fresh, clean & herbaceous

Bangkok Sour

Bourbon, tamarind, fresh lemon juice, palm sugar, red wine, bitters

Inspired by New York's namesake cocktail, we have added a touch of Thai charm into this timeless classic – the perfect balance of natural sweet & sourness.

To The Moon & Back

Pandan & coconut vodka, fresh lime, coconut palm, prosecco

During the Yi Peng festival in Chang Mai, the night sky is filled with the sight of 1000s of fire lantern! We have honoured this tradition with a serve that is crisp, dry & light as a feather.

The Golden Gun

Vodka, gin, martini bianco, ginger, pomelo

Ko Tapu (aka James Bond Island) was immortalized by the 1974 James Bond movie, The Man with the Golden Gun and are positive that the world's most famous spy would approve of this “shaken not stirred” libation.

THE NIGHT MARKET

Doi Tung

Pandan & coconut vodka, kahlua, espresso

A modern pick me up with the magical aromatics of pandan and coffee.

Sao Wa Ros

Cognac, port, lychee, passion fruit, nutmeg
Seeing is not believing!

Lady Fingers

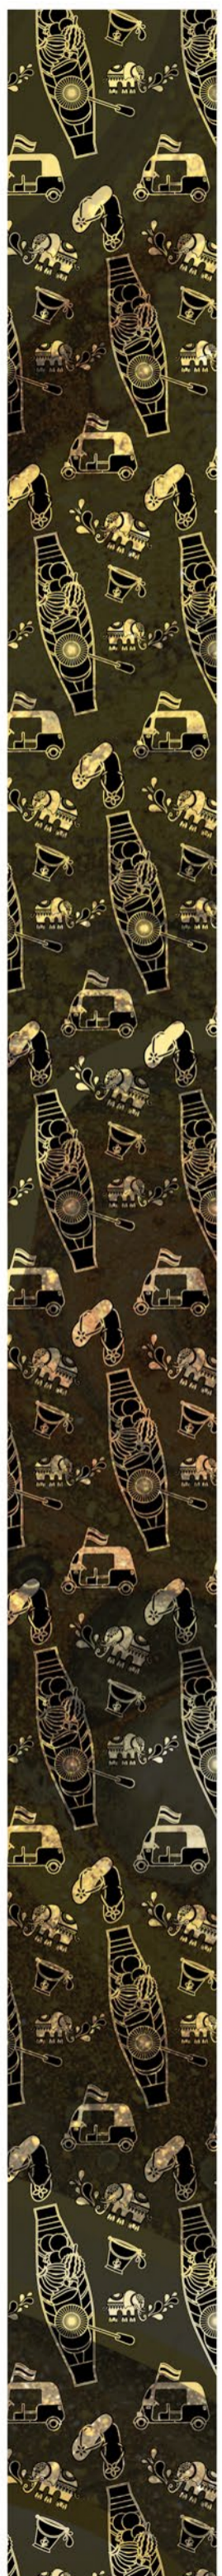

Banana aged rum, cacao, honey, bitters

A unique twist on the oldest cocktail of them all.
